Academic Program Standards/Policies/Accreditation Information

Relationship to Curriculum Design

- Offered within the "Improving Occupational Performance "courses– "How Do OTA's Promote Occupation?" (OTAP 2310, 2330, 2340, 2150, 2350) This course addresses challenges to and interventions to facilitate occupational engagement (self-care, play, school) for persons from birth to age 22. It builds on the foundations and challenges to occupation already learned during the first two semesters and will carry over into the OT practice job training period.
- Using the PEO model as a guide, students develop a better understanding of how unique factors within the person, environment, and occupation subsystems develop from infancy through early adulthood, and how these factors support or inhibit occupational performance. Through laboratory activities, exploration of population-specific evaluations and assignments, as well as student demonstration and competency assessments, students begin to use their developing clinical reasoning skills to choose and implement pediatric treatment activities based on the client's occupational performance, environmental contexts, and overall occupational needs.

- The OTPF is incorporated into both teaching and learning experiences as students use evidence to support intervention implementation and outcome documentation related to performance areas and occupational performance at home, school, and during play.
- Course components are for the Advanced OTA student and build upon applying and analyzing skills and framework established in the intermediate courses. This course most closely relates to Bloom's Taxonomy levels of Analyze, Evaluate, and Create.
- Curricular Threads: Discovering Occupational Beings Across the Lifespan, Facilitating Adaptation and Creativity, Promoting Occupational Performance, Developing the Professional
